were instructed to report to the general navy recruiting office at 306 9th street tomorrow to undergo the physical examination, or to the President's yacht, the Mayflower, anchored at the Washington navy yard. The recruiting parties on duty within the building and in front of it were from the general recruiting office and from the Mayflower.

Appeals for recruits were voiced by Representative Patrick H. Kelley of Michigan, member of the Committee on naval affairs of the House; Lieut S. F. Bryant of the Mayflower and by Capt. J. H. Trynor, an American who recently completed sixteen months of service at the French front as a member of the Black Watch Scottish Regiment and the holder of a Victoria Cross awarded to him for bravery in action. Another who urged Washington to do its part in obtaining recruits for the navy was Philip Kauffmann, son of Victor Kauffmann, Sunday editor of The Star. Mr. Kauffmann was one of the many students of Princeton University who recently responded to the motor boat coast patrol, the newly created fleet of submarrine chasers.

that "there was more where that came from."

He outlined the attitude of this government during the trying days prior to the declaration of war, saying that the American people had tried hard to remain neutral; that in spite of their rights being infringed the government had endeavored to pursue negotiations which would settle matters on a proper basis after the war. He said that the act of Germany in sinking the ship Frye could have been settled by a money payment, but that as time went on "Germany deemed it necessary to destroy something on which no price can be placed—the lives of American eitizens when they are in places where they have a perfect right to be."

He described the sinking of the two American ships on their way back to American ships on their way back to American rights on sea as well as on these shores. The nation which does not protect its citizens, and that means the beginning of the end."

He said also that when Germany outlined a zone to be encircled by U-boats operating against American commerce, the next step would be to enlarge the zone more and more until the only place an American ship could be with safety would be tied up to a dock in American waters.

"Now we are in this war," he said, "no matter what the individual opinions have been before, there is now only one opinion, and that is we must strike the hardest blow possible at the earliest moment."
He spoke of the navy as "the natural defense of America," and said he had always favored a navy large enough to keep every possible hostile soldier from the shores of this country.

"If there are young men here," he sald, in concluding, "who want to get into an organization which has reflected honor and glory since the days of John Paul Jones, they could not do a better thing than enroll tonight."

Navy Faces Big Problem.

The big problem facing this country today is not how to keep the United States out of war, but how to keep war out of the United States, declared Lieut. Bryant of the Mayflower. It can be solved by having a navy that is sufficiently powerful to protect the coasts of the nation, he said. Three tasks confront this government, now that it has declared war against Germany, Lieut. Bryant said. First, German submarines they must be cleared of commerce raiders and the third task is the convoying of ships carrying foodstuffs and munitions to our allies in Europe. None of these can be accomplished unless the United States Navy is properly manned. The young men of the land must come forward and enlist, so as to bring the navy up to the desired strength of 87,000. Lieut. Bryant said.

"We can't fight Germany with Christian Science methods," he declared in conclusion. "We must have men."

Capt. Trynor was loudly applauded ey must be cleared of commerce raid tian Science methods," he declared in conclusion. "We must have men."

Capt. Trynor was loudly applauded when he stepped onto the platform to address the great gathering. This American citizen who fought at the battles of the Marne, Mons, La Chappelle, Ypres, Hill 89 and in other notable engagements, and also a veteran of the South African and Boxer wars, told some first-hand facts about German methods of warfare and made an urgent appeal for the young men of Washington to enlist in the United States Navy, that German ships might be driven from all seas. He told of the destruction of hospitals by German aircraft and the killing of hundreds of helpless soldiers who lay wounded within them. Capt. Trynor received fourteen wounds during his sixteen months of service and spent nine months of the time in hospitals.

Smaller Communities Leading.

Smaller communities are outdoing the larger cities in the matter of enlistments in the navy, declared Mr. Kauffmann, who told how students of Princeton, Cornell, Yale, Harvard, Williams and other great universities and colbuilding last night to witness the third leges of the country are responding to the call to colors. The number of ennection with The Star's campaign to listments in small towns in proportion obtain recruits for the United States to their population is much larger than Announcement was made that a number of members of the editorial, art department, business office and composing room forces of The Star have responded to the call to the colors as members of the National Guard of the District of Columbia and of the Officers' Reserve Corps of the army and navy.

A pretty feature of the evening's program was the singing of "America, Here Is My Boy," by Miss Agnes Whelan, accompanied by the band of the Mayflower, with Bandmaster Peterman leading. At the conclusion of the chorus Yeoman Utter of the Mayflower, jumped to the platform beside Miss Whelan and stood at "Salute" as a spot light was played on them.

Nothing impressed the audience more than the recitation of "The Star Spangled Banner," by Charles B. Hanford, the Shakespearean actor. At the conclusion of the recitation the words of the beloved national anthem were flashed on the screen and the entire

"The day's enlistments brought the total enlisted strength of the active service, not including reserves or militia who are mobilized and on militia who are mobilized and of active duty, up to 68,937, an increase of 6,270 since the 1st of March. Outlook Encouraging.

"There is every indication that the present rate of enlistments will continue, probably increase, and if so, the navy will be able to celebrate the an-niversary of Admiral Dewey's victory on May 1 with the enlistment for the first time in the history of the navy of 100,000 men'
